

Self Service Credit Card terminal for Print Release Stations

The CPI system can provide a Credit Card payment option for Print Release Stations where multiple computers can share the same printer.

The print release station is a software installed on a computer next to the printer that holds all print jobs until selected by their owner for printing and payment.

It is an inexpensive application that works. A student sends the print documents from any computer, the documents are held in the print release station where the student can select them and pay at the printer.

No credit card, No problem

The CPI system can be activated by remote control for non credit card users. The customer takes the receipt and pays at the register or adds the charge to the hotel bill.
